MEMORIES AND PLACES

It is all about remembering the places I have been. To a waterfall: Iceland. Countryside: Australia.

Tropical Garden: Mediterranean. California.....

During 2020 all you could do was imagine those places.
